Four clicks. That's the whole job.

- 1 Open the link, pick your face
Once per device — it remembers you.
- 2 Hit "Check in"
Your character walks to your desk, glows green, starts typing. Everyone sees you're in.
- 3 Say what you're on
One line — "pricing the OPES booth" — under your name. No more "any update?" messages.
- 4 Step away / check out
Honest office, honest map.

Click a face – the camera follows you

- ◇ Your character walks over — through doors, not walls
- ◇ The scene zooms in gently and moves with you
- ◇ See their status, tasks and ongoing projects
- ◇ Leave them a message — even if they're offline
- ◇ Switch people from the dropdown with all the faces

THE MAGIC TRICK

The tracker sheet is still the boss

Nobody changes how they work. Keep filling Tracker EXP.xlsx exactly like always — the office copies it automatically.

- ◇ Change a deadline in the sheet → the card moves groups within the hour
- ◇ Mark a pitch “submission complete” → the card dims into Done
- ◇ Cancel a row → it disappears from the board
- ◇ Add steps & tick boxes on the board — that part is ours, not the sheet’s

WHY SHOW UP HERE EVERY DAY?

Because it beats 47 “any update?” messages

One glance

Who’s in, who’s on site, what’s due — without asking anyone anything.

Zero surprises

Submission deadlines stare at everyone from the office TV. Nothing slips quietly.

Your work, visible

Your “working on” line + your green glow = the whole company knows you’re carrying the day.

It’s actually fun

You’re a cartoon. Your GM has a ponytail. The coffee machine steams. Come on.

It's about to get personal

- ◇ Real logins — your email, your character, nobody can be you
- ◇ Team chat for everyone + private DMs that stay private
- ◇ Notifications when someone messages or @mentions you
- ◇ Personal task lists — yours to edit, others can view & comment
- ◇ Fun statuses — On break · Site visit (with the event name!) · Client meeting · Prayer
- ◇ Morning question — “what are you on today?”
- ◇ Confetti every time a project is marked Done
- ◇ All of it in the same one link you already have
